TEAM	Our long-term exit strategy has two possible paths. The first is growing into a company valuable enough that larger foodservice distributors such as Sysco or GFS may want to acquire us in order to strengthen their regional distribution network and purchasing data capabilities. The second path is continuing to grow independently while simplifying and improving our operations over time so we can become more competitive with the larger distributors mentioned above. Companies like Sysco were built slowly over decades, and our goal is to scale steadily while using technology and data to build a more efficient and modern food distribution company.	After 5 years, we aim to establish as a serious player within the British Columbia foodservice distribution sector, with a strong foothold in major regional markets such as Kamloops, Kelowna, and the Lower Mainland. Alongside our wholesale operations, we aim to develop the first publicly available commercial purchasing map focused on British Columbia produce and foodservice demand. This platform would provide farmers and suppliers with valuable purchasing insights to help inform crop planning, production decisions, demand forecasting, and overall farm operations.	At the 1-year mark, the core founder team would begin expanding operations into Kelowna with a focus on growing both the wholesale business and the regional purchasing data set within the market. Operationally, we would aim to support this growth with one part-time employee based in Kelowna, alongside two employees in Kamloops consisting of one part-time and one full-time operational role focused on logistics, warehouse operations, customer fulfillment, and delivery coordination.	As we as founders transition more towards the purchasing mapping component of LC, we would like to see increase staffing within Local COnnect to handle additional roles like increase truck routes, product ordering ect. We would estimate 2 paid staff members at this point.	Around the 90-day mark, we aim to make our first operational hire to support warehouse and delivery operations. This part-time role, estimated at approximately 24 hours per week across 3 days, would primarily focus on driving the reefer truck, order fulfillment, and warehouse management. This hire is an important step in allowing the founders to transition away from day-to-day operational responsibilities and focus more heavily on sales growth, strategic partnerships, and overall company trajectory.	My main objective for the next 30 days is to establish a clear schedule for myself and my two business partners that allows for efficient sales and operational execution. This includes defining dedicated delivery and operations days on Tuesdays, Wednesdays, and Fridays to improve consistency, coordination, and overall workflow.
TECH			At the 1-year mark, we aim to have active users operating on our marketplace platform across both Kamloops and Kelowna, alongside a deeper integration between the marketplace and regional purchasing data layer. A major focus during this stage will be extensive platform testing surrounding data security, core usability, supplier and buyer workflows, and overall platform reliability to ensure the system can scale effectively and securely.	Within 6 months, we aim to operate both a sustainable wholesale marketplace and a regional commercial purchasing map covering a major foodservice center within the Interior of British Columbia, specifically targeting markets such as Kamloops and Kelowna. This would provide valuable insight into regional purchasing behavior, supplier demand, and product movement while helping strengthen coordination between buyers and suppliers across the regional food system.	With our ordering system becoming increasingly stable, we would look to further develop our platform into a regional commercial purchasing data mapping tool. This is an important next step, as it transitions Local Connect from being solely a food wholesaler into a software and data platform that not only connects suppliers and buyers, but also provides suppliers with valuable insights into regional commercial purchasing trends, product demand, and procurement behavior.	Continual improvement of our ordering system is a major priority. We launched a new system in April, and as such, working closely with both customers and suppliers to improve usability and operational efficiency is crucial. Over the next 30 days, we aim to continue refining the platform experience by simplifying ordering workflows, improving product organization, and reducing friction throughout the purchasing process. We also plan to implement a dedicated customer product request feature, allowing restaurants to request products directly through the platform and helping us better understand customer demand trends and sourcing opportunities.
TRACTION			At the 1-year mark, we aim to establish strong visibility and credibility within the Interior British Columbia foodservice sector through both our wholesale operations and technology platform. Our traction goals include reaching 50 actively ordering wholesale accounts while also leveraging our purchasing data tools to strengthen and optimize our produce wholesaling capabilities through demand forecasting, pre-selling, and improved procurement	Within 6 months, we aim to grow to 15–20 actively ordering wholesale accounts with an average weekly account value of approximately $700 per week. In parallel, we would also like to establish an initial purchasing data user base of 15 restaurants that we can begin mapping in order to identify regional purchasing trends, product demand, and commercial procurement patterns.	Within the next 90 days, it is critical that we surpass 10 actively ordering accounts. This milestone directly supports our revenue targets while also establishing a strong operational foundation within the Kamloops foodservice sector. Achieving this level of recurring customer activity will help validate both our wholesale model and the long-term scalability of the platform.	This month is focused primarily on our wholesale business. We are looking to expand Valhala Smokehouse into paper products and poultry, we are also working on closing three new bread accounts: Kirstens Hideout, Stock Pot Cafe, and Columbia Diner
TREASURY			At the 1-year mark, we aim to generate approximately $1,250,000 in gross wholesale revenue while continuing to strengthen our operational stability and regional market presence. In parallel, we aim to secure grant and innovation funding to support the continued development of the Local Connect Data platform, including purchasing intelligence tools, marketplace integration, and regional procurement mapping capabilities.	At the 6-month mark, as a wholesale business should be financially stable and generating upwards of $67,200 in monthly revenue. At this stage, a greater operational focus will shift toward maintaining and improving net margins, with a target margin of approximately 15% as the business continues to scale.	Our main financial goal for the next 90 days is to surpass $15,000 in gross monthly revenue. Reaching this milestone is crucial, as it allows the founders and operators to begin paying themselves sustainably while also creating the capacity to expand the team through part-time operational hires. Achieving this level of recurring revenue would represent an important step toward operational stability and long-term scalability.	Main finacial goal for this month is to complete our first years corporate taxes.
